N. OTHER SUPPORT

The Ohio State University Analytical Toxicology Laboratory is the official testing laboratory of the Ohio State Racing Commission and has served in that capacity since 1965. The laboratory annually tests approximately 37,000 blood and urine samples collected from horses racing at seven commercial racetracks and at approximately sixty county fairs in Ohio. The samples are tested for the presence of drugs prohibited by the Ohio State Racing Commission. Laboratory staff members work closely with commission veterinarians, racing commissioners and staff persons, and with the Ohio Attorney General's office to carry out its role as the official laboratory of the Commission. As a result of this effort the OSU College of Veterinary Medicine is awarded research funds (..... in 2001) for research on the horse.

The Ohio State University Analytical Toxicology Laboratory is the official testing laboratory of the Ohio Department of Agriculture and has served in that capacity since 1995. The laboratory annually tests approximately 1,000 hair and urine samples collected from livestock entered in livestock shows at county fairs and the Ohio State Fair. The samples are tested for the presence of drugs prohibited by state law. Laboratory staff members work closely with Department of Agriculture veterinarians and staff persons, fair officials and fair veterinarians, and with the Ohio Attorney General's office to carry out its role as the official laboratory.

The Ohio State University Analytical Toxicology Laboratory was designated one of two Research and Reference Centers for the national Uniform Drug Testing and Quality Assurance Program of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners (NASRC) in 1981. OSU Analytical Toxicology Laboratory developed new methods for detecting drugs in horse samples, prepared proficiency and blind test samples for other laboratories participating in the program, conducted research on the pharmacokinetics and metabolism of drugs in horses, and evaluated test procedures and data submitted by other laboratories. From 1988-1992, the Ohio laboratory was the only Research and Reference Center of a new Quality Assurance Program organized by the Association of Racing Commissioners International (ARCI). The activities of the laboratory under this new program were similar to those under the older program but were broader in scope.
